iOmniscient has formed a partnership with Australian company Hills Transmission Solutions, a provider of a variety of transmission products covering all aspects of CCTV.

Using iOmniscient's unique intelligent analysis products Hills will now provide a new technology that transforms any existing CCTV installation into a sophisticated intelligent digital security system. Through advanced alarm handling with intelligent exception reporting, Hills will provide a completely automated surveillance solution, bringing highly intelligent digital solutions to otherwise redundant and ineffective CCTV systems.

Anthony Colicchia, General Manager Hills Transmission Solutions, commented on the new partnership: " We have been keeping a very close eye on iOmniscient's development over the last 5 years, business is all about timing and given the critical security requirements for Infrastructure, Defense, Aviation and the Public domain, we are very excited with iOmniscient technologies and especially the synergies between our businesses but more importantly the opportunities we will bring to our customers."

Dr Rustom Kanga, CEO of iOmniscient says: "Hills are a rapidly growing company who specialise in state-of-the-art networking technology. They have great history in integrating new technologies and we believe that adding Intelligent Surveillance to their portfolio will result in a unique surveillance solution with major benefits for the end-user."
